

HOW TO HELP YOUR STUDENT

(even when you're not a musician)

Even though you may not think you know anything about music, you can still help your child. Here are some helpful hints:

1. Your children need to practice. There may be some weeks where more practicing is necessary. Scheduling a time for this is extremely helpful and important.
2. Designate an area for your child to practice. This area should be quiet, should not disturb others, should have a place for your child to sit, and should have a stand. (Hint: The small document holders for use with computers work well for make-shift stands)
3. Ask your child to perform something for you. If your child knows you are interested in hearing something this may motivate him/her to practice.
4. Learn with your child! The books we have are user-friendly. Have your child teach you what they learned! It's a great way to review.
